

The Robert “Bob” N. BUNDY

 Accounting and
Finance Program

OTTAWA UNIVERSITY

The Robert “Bob” N. Bundy Accounting and Finance Program was created to honor the legacy and dedication of its namesake to Ottawa University students and their families.

Bob was the business manager at Ottawa University from 1936 to 1971, dedicating 35 years to making a difference in the lives of generations of Ottawa University students and alumni. He worked long hours to help the University through tough times, as well as good times. On many occasions, one could see the light on in Bob’s office late into the evening. Not only was he the business manager, but also the budget director, teacher, ticket salesman, mailman, general handyman, and many other assorted jobs. Whatever duty the University asked, Bob was eager to assist, and he always excelled at meeting any challenge.

His commitment and dedication were also found at home with his wife, Anne Mae. Together, they raised five children and lived 24-hours a day for the church and Ottawa University. Bob assisted many generations of students as their life travels took them through Ottawa University and that commitment to assist students continues today through The Robert “Bob” N. Bundy Accounting and Finance Program.
